M-G-M CARTOONS distributed by Loew's Incorporated

Jerry sat in front of his little mouse hole and sulked Tuffy, his little pal, had gone off to visit relatives, and Jerry was lonely He had tried to make friends with the people who lived in the same house, but, as always, they just wouldn't warm up

Jerry had approached the lady while she was baking a cake The lady had welcomed him with hot cake—pan and all—and then fled, screaming out of the kitchen.

Next, Jerry had tried the man He waited patiently in the bookcase, where the man kept his pipe and tobacco When the man reached for his pipe, Jerry handed him a package of matches, and bowed politely The man stared for a moment then he threw a book at Jerry, and when he missed he heaved an ash tray but this luckily missed also

Poor Jerry decided to try once more. He hid in the wastebasket in the little girl's room When she came up to bed, he poked his head out and squeaked, "Hello!"

The little girl looked at him. "Go away," she sniffed. "I wouldn't play with you You're just an ordinary mouse I want a white mouse, with pink ears and a pink nose"

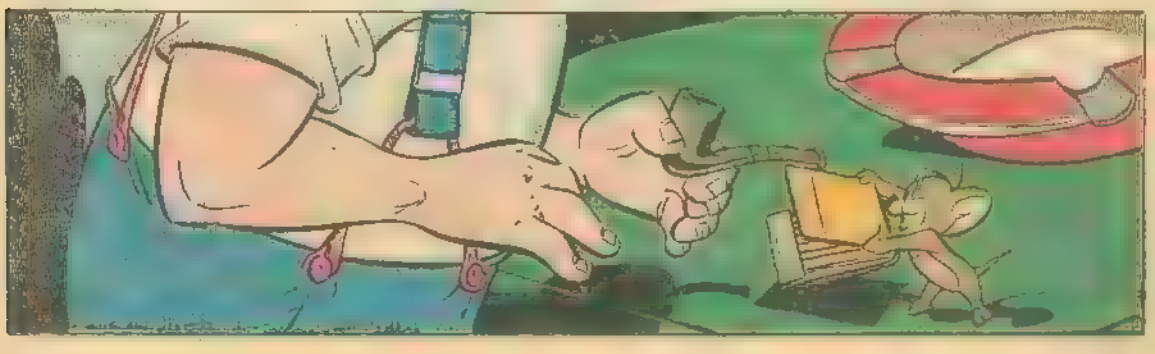
Jerry slunk away, completely disgusted with people, and fed up on life in general.

On his way back to the little room behind the baseboard where he lived, Jerry noticed on the wall a framed picture of a family tree "Hmm," thought the little fellow, "I bet if I could find my family tree, I'd discover a lot of friendly folks"

Jerry waited till after midnight, then sneaked up to the library The moon peeked brightly through the window Jerry dragged a small dictionary over to the window, and opened the book to the word, "MOUSE"

"Ah!" Jerry said to himself "I see I am a RODENT! But what is a RODENT?" Jerry thumbed through the dictionary until he found, "RODENT"

"Well, Well!" he exclaimed "Whaddayaknow I've got a whole lot of close relatives cousins, in fact Let's see It says my cousins are the beaver, the porcupine, the rabbit, and the squirrel THE SQUIRREL!!!

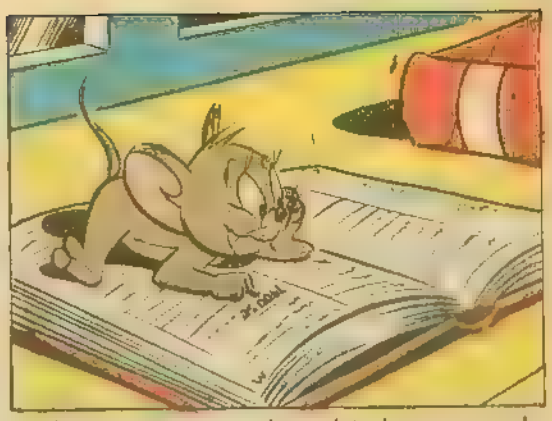


That snooty guy has a nerve! Here we are cousins, and he's never so much as looked at me! . . . Wait till I tell him off . . ."

Next morning, Jerry woke up early. He hopped out of his snug little bed, and ran through the kitchen, to the back door. He squeezed through a hole in the screen door, and sat down on the back stoop. It wasn't long before Filbert, the dandified squirrel, who lived in the tired old oak tree, made his appearance. He looked directly at Jerry, flicked his tail in a haughty gesture, and muttered, "Well! It's a sad state of affairs when one such as I must come into contact with MICE!"

Jerry heard this remark and was very much annoyed "Oh, yeah!" he retorted. "You're my first cousin . . . just because you have that moth-eaten feather duster tacked on behind you, you think you are a big shot, huh?"

"Oh dear," sighed the squirrel, stealing a few crumbs off the bird bath. "The nonsense some of these inferior beings delude themselves with."



Jerry got so mad at this last remark, that he hopped up and down, and ground his little teeth Then, . . . he had an idea . "I'll show that snob, Filbert, a thing or two!" he sputtered.

The little mouse ran out of the yard and into the street There, in front of the house, was parked the newsboy's bike, and hanging from the handlebars, was a beautiful red foxtail. Jerry climbed up on the seat and gnawed through the string that held the tail to the bike The foxtail dropped off with Jerry still hanging on to it. It was a most astonished newsboy, who watched the foxtail go wiggling into the bushes, apparently all by itself.

Jerry was delighted with his new tail, and he wasted no time He ran into the kitchen and looked for a tube of glue He finally found a tube in the china cupboard Jerry glued the grand, new fluffy tail onto his own little skimpy one. Then, he observed himself in the shiny glass door of the cupboard. "Oh boy!" he chuckled. "Will I take that squirrel for a ride ! ! !"

Jerry went upstairs, invaded a dresser drawer, and came away with a classy bow tie On a desk, he discovered a small magnifying glass lying next to a stamp collection. "Just the thing," thought the mouse, and he added it to his odd collection.

He hopped down the stairs, surveyed himself in the hall mirror, and tied on the tie. It was a little large, but extremely effective. "Ha!" giggled Jerry, holding the magnifying glass up to one eye. "I am the very picture of foreign nobility. Anyhow, that Filbert is so dumb, he'll fall like a ton of bricks!"

Jerry went out into the back yard. This time, cousin Filbert was busy chasing birds off the garage roof Jerry called to him, "Pardon, my friend, but are you a squirrel? You're the first beast I've come across who remotely resembles one."

Filbert stopped his running about, and stared at Jerry, in open mouthed astonishment. "What in heck are you talking about? Of course I'm a squirrel!"

The mischievous mouse closely observed Filbert through his improvised monocle, the magnifying glass, "A thousand pardons, my very fine friend," murmured Jerry "Please, I meant no offense It is just that in my honored country, only the poor peasants have tails such as yours"

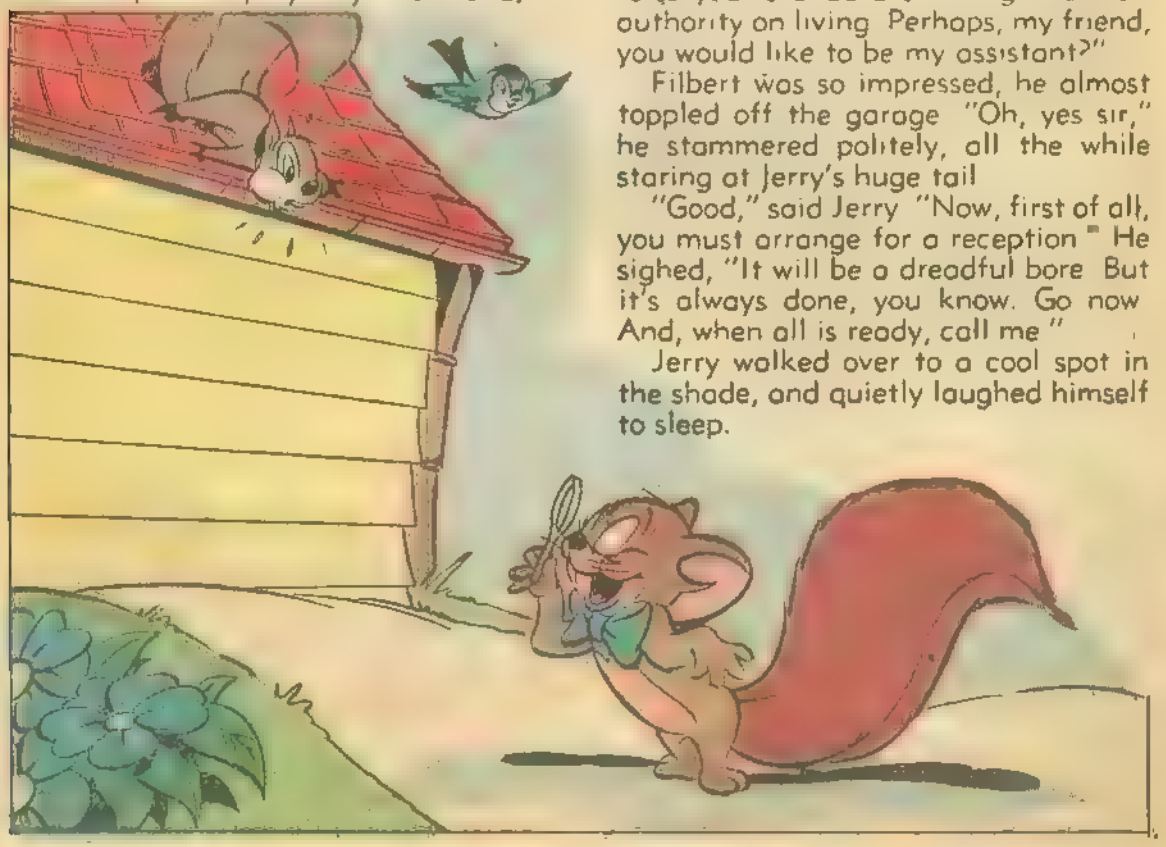
Filbert was lost for words He gaped at Jerry, and then gasped, "Who are you, and where do you come from?"

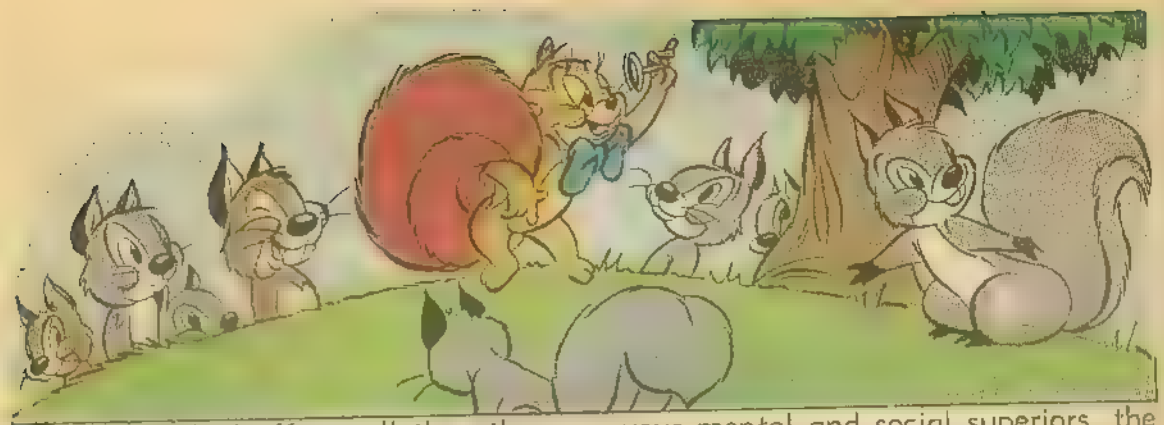
Jerry drew himself up to his full height of three inches, and made a stiff little bow "I am Lord Stuffy McNutty of Almondshire on Acorn" Then he added, "Your government wishes me to raise your standard of living I am an authority on living Perhaps, my friend, you would like to be my assistant?"

Filbert was so impressed, he almost toppled off the garage "Oh, yes sir," he stammered politely, all the while staring at Jerry's huge tail

"Good," said Jerry "Now, first of all, you must arrange for a reception" He sighed, "It will be a dreadful bore But it's always done, you know. Go now And, when all is ready, call me"

Jerry walked over to a cool spot in the shade, and quietly laughed himself to sleep.





Filbert dashed off to tell the other squirrels of his new position, and also to invite them to the reception for Lord Stuffy McNutty, the official authority on living.

It wasn't long before the squirrel was back to inform Jerry that the reception committee was waiting.

The little mouse arose in a dignified manner, and draped his tremendous tail over one arm. Filbert tried to do the same, and managed to look just as silly as possible. He led Jerry to a large tree. All the squirrels from the area were gathered there. On seeing Filbert and Jerry, they all pulled their tails in front and over their arms.

Jerry followed Filbert up the tree, but due to the weight of his tail, and his lack of climbing experience, he weaved and wobbled as he climbed. Immediately, all the squirrels began to weave and wobble. What a sight!

Jerry settled himself, and began a speech . . . "Fellow squirrels, I am here because you need help . . . You have all become unbearably nutty. First of all, I suggest you eat more brain food. Fish are plentiful, and all you have to do is catch them . . . Secondly, you will find your mental and social superiors, the mouse family, willing to help you with your manners and social graces . . . Thirdly, and last of all, you must all rub your tails in honey once a day . . . then, you will soon look like I do." Jerry bowed, as he stated, "That is all."

After he finished, and while all the squirrels ran off in search of fish and honey, Jerry made his way back to the house. He shed his borrowed finery, and sat on the window sill to watch the fun.

A great howl went up, and as Jerry stared, a great many half-drowned squirrels came running past. Behind them flew thousands of bees, and these bees were settling on the sticky tails which were covered with stolen honey.

"Help us! ! ! !" screamed the panicky squirrels to Jerry. "Cousin Mouse, what shall we do? ? ? ! ! !"

"DO? ? ! !" questioned Jerry, waving the foxtail out the window, "Why I suggest you just keep running! ! . . . Any time you listen to me, you're sure to get stung! !"

Jerry didn't dare go near a squirrel for weeks . . . And Cousin Filbert waited in vain . . . with a slingshot . . . and a lot of nice hard nuts. . .

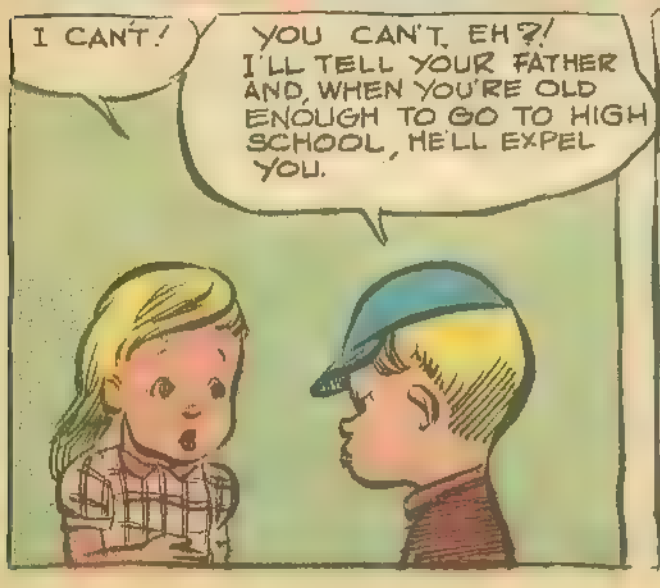
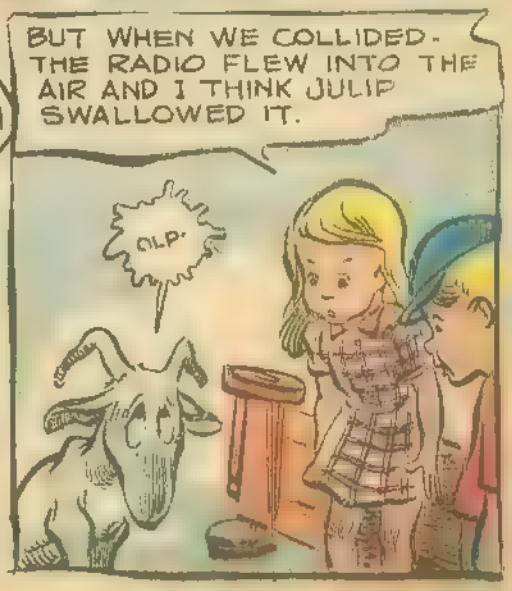
GREAT — THEN LET'S HAVE IT BACK.



I CAN'T!
YOU CAN'T, EH?! I'LL TELL YOUR FATHER AND, WHEN YOU'RE OLD ENOUGH TO GO TO HIGH SCHOOL, HE'LL EXPEL YOU.

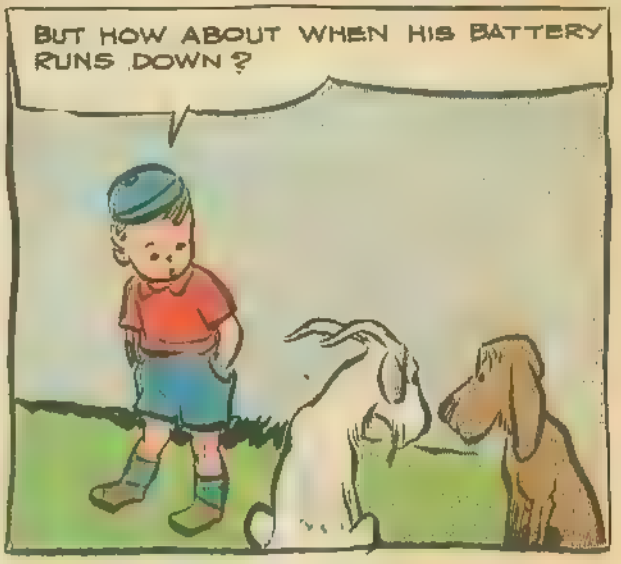


BUT WHEN WE COLLIDED - THE RADIO FLEW INTO THE AIR AND I THINK JULIP SWALLOWED IT.
OLP.

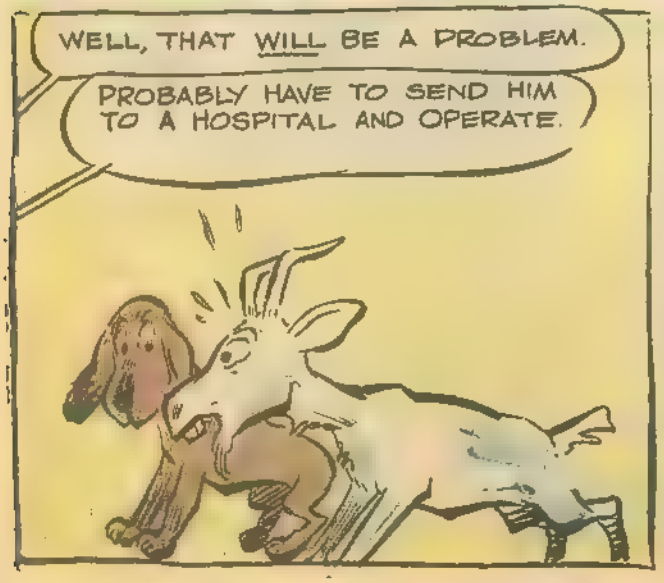
HAW-HAW — NOW YOU'LL HAVE A TALKING GOAT!-

SAY, THAT'S RIGHT— NOT ONLY A TALKING GOAT- BUT A SINGING GOAT AND SOMETIMES A GOAT THAT SOUNDS LIKE A PIANO.
HE'LL STILL BE JUST A GOAT

NO HE WON'T! HE'LL BE WORTH A MILLION DOLLARS.

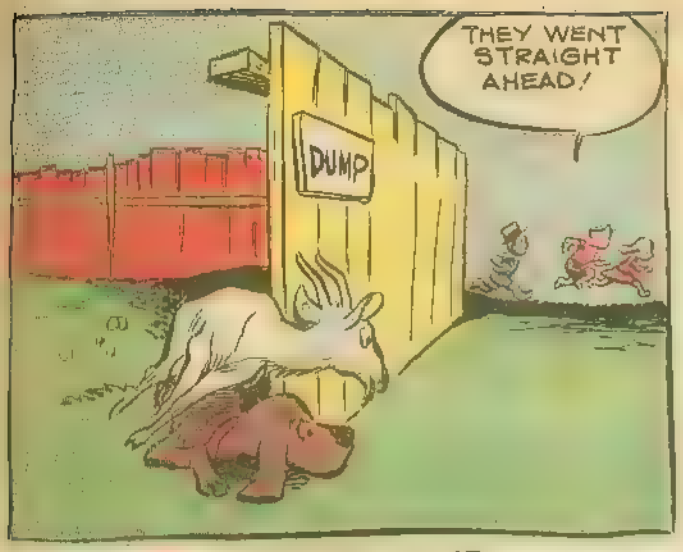


BUT HOW ABOUT WHEN HIS BATTERY RUNS DOWN?

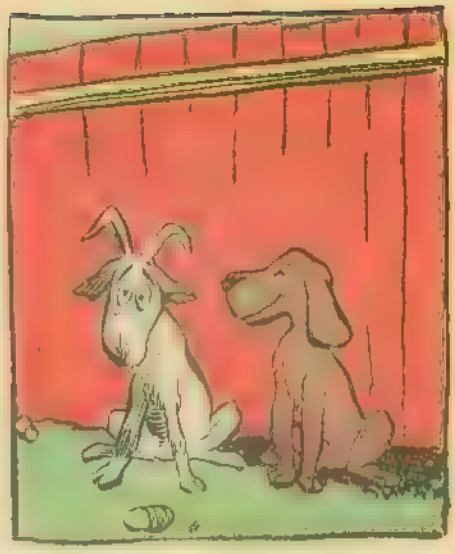


WELL, THAT WILL BE A PROBLEM.
PROBABLY HAVE TO SEND HIM TO A HOSPITAL AND OPERATE.

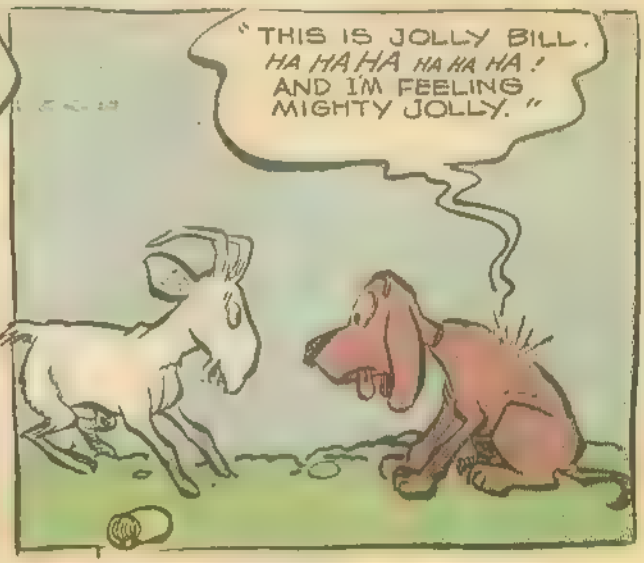
NOW YOU'VE SCARED HIM! AND LILLIAN, TOO.



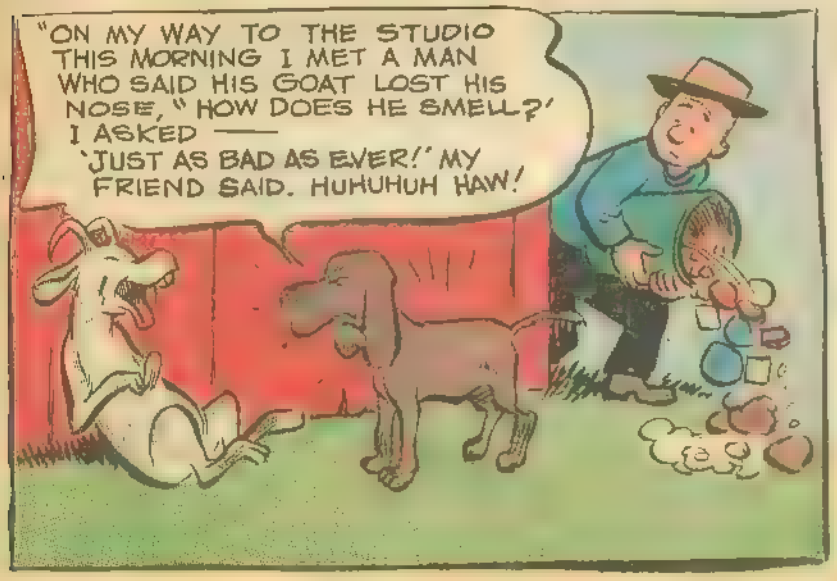
DUMP
THEY WENT STRAIGHT AHEAD!



WHEEEoooOOOp SQUAWK - WHEEK GOOD MORNING, FRIENDS!



"THIS IS JOLLY BILL. HA HA HA HA HA HA! AND I'M FEELING MIGHTY JOLLY."



"ON MY WAY TO THE STUDIO THIS MORNING I MET A MAN WHO SAID HIS GOAT LOST HIS NOSE, "HOW DOES HE SMELL?' I ASKED — 'JUST AS BAD AS EVER!' MY FRIEND SAID. HUHUHUH HAW!

JUST HEARD A FUNNY STORY-- A MAN SAID HIS GOAT LOST HIS NOSE AND THE OTHER MAN SAID "WHAT WILL HE SMELL WITH?"
"WHAT WILL HE SMELL WITH?" SAID THE FIRST - "WHY, JUST AS BAD AS ALWAYS." HAR HAR RARRAR.'
HAR?
WHO TOLD YOU THAT?
I HEARD A DOG TELL IT TO A GOAT.
FOOEY
DON'T YOU LIKE JOKES HAROLD?

AND NOW A LITTLE MUSIC, A NUMBER FROM A BYGONE DAY
I DON'T MIND TELLING YOU I TOOK MY GIRL TO KEW, AND EMMA WAS THE DARLING CREATURES NAME.
TICK TICK
GULP
WHILE STANDING ON THE PIER, SOME CHAPS AT HER DID LEER — AND ONE AND ALL AROUND HER DID EXCLAIM: TICK
WHOA EMMA OH WHOA EMMA SKWOOOORK
BRRAANNG
DINGDING DINGDING DING
ARE YOU TROUBLED WITH STORE TEETH SQUEAK?

This little bird is happy on his birthday because he has just been given the fattest worm by his proud parents. His father had to search for miles and miles and his mother prepared it with loving care.

A special birthday card will be sent by us announcing the gift and the name of the donor.

If yours is a REGULAR SUBSCRIPTION and not a birthday gift, fill out left side of coupon and leave right side blank.

This little boy is happy too. He did not get a fat worm for his birthday. His father was too lazy to go out searching for one. His father filled out a coupon for a year's subscription for OUR GANG WITH TOM & JERRY. Mother baked him a beautiful birthday cake. Although OUR GANG WITH TOM & JERRY can't compete with mother's cake, there is this to say for OUR GANG WITH TOM & JERRY. After the cake has gone the way of all cakes, every month OUR GANG WITH TOM & JERRY arrives as a reminder of Johnny's birthday right until the next year. HAPPY BIRTHDAY!
